And Once There Was Chinese

THE SECRET OF SERENITY,
by Carl Glick, Thomas Y.
Crowell Co., New York, $3.

ONCE UPON a time there was a Chinese who didn't observe his race's traditional silence — and he died. He was 800 years old and of course he ought to have died a long time ago, but the Chinese like to point out that if he hadn't said just one word too many he might have lived forever.

That legendary Chinese was a man named Peng. His story is just one of many in a new book by Carl Glick, author of "Shake Hands With the Dragon," "Three Times I Bow," and other volumes on life and culture in New York's Chinatown. Mr. Glick has made himself an authority on America's Chinese, and the philosophy and literature they brought from the land of their ancestors.

"The Secret of Serenity" is a study in Chinese placidity, carrying the hope that there is something in it of value to the rushed, harassed Western world. That China herself this moment is not the serene character her literature implies is quite beside the point, for the classic Chinese has a low opinion of both politicians and soldiers, without which the China of 1951 would be peaceful enough.

But to get on with Carl Glick's account of the man named Peng and how he happened to be cut down at the untimely age of 800—

"There's an old Chinese legend," writes Glick, "about a man named Peng who lived to be 800 years old. This happened only because the Lord of the Underworld made a mistake. He has a book, so says the legend, in which are written the names of all the people on earth and exactly the number of years each person will live. But he was extremely busy one day and forgot to enter the date of Peng's death. So Peng lived on and on and was completely forgotten by the Lord of the Underworld."

"Finally he was 800 years old and nobody knew it but Peng. He really had a wonderful time and, being in good health and robust, had many wives, whom over the 800 years he buried one by one."

"Of course in the Underworld these wives got together and gossiped among themselves as women do. And eventually they discovered that all of them had been married to Peng."

"The Lord of the Underworld was annoyed. He had lost much face because of his mistake. So he immediately sent a lot of devils to the earth to try to find Peng."

"But this was difficult since Peng rarely spoke, and certainly he hadn't told his brand new wife that he was 800 years old."

"One day Peng saw some children playing. Now it must be told that these children were the devils in disguise. Since Peng was a most curious man, he liked to ask questions and get the other fellow to do all the talking. So he asked the children what they were doing."

"We are washing pieces of coal," said the eldest child.

"Why?" asked Peng.

"Because if we wash coal carefully we will make it turn white," was the answer.

"How stupid if you, cried Peng. In my 800 years on earth I have never seen a piece of white coal!"

"The devils immediately jumped on him, seized him, and dragged him off to the Underworld where he belonged and where he had a lot of explaining to do to all the wives whom he had married for the past 800 years."

"Texans may be masters of the tall tale, but Carl Glick, as you see, can do something with sly Chinese humor."

Dawson May Have to Make Statement

Washington, March 31 — (AP) — A new senate move to get Dawson White House aide Donald Dawson from his sworn office to charges that he is a member of an influence ring in the government seems possible.

Senator Fulbright (D-Ark.), chairman of a senate banking subcommittee which accused Dawson, told reporters today that President Truman has apparently reopened the issue.

Mr. Truman, who has termed the charges asinine, told a news conference Thursday he has no intention of firing Dawson. He said it would not be necessary to subpoena any White House employee whose testimony before a senate group was necessary, but did not clear up who should judge the necessity for the testimony.

Authority of congressional committees to require testimony from anyone in the President's confidence is a long-debated issue.

Fulbright told reporters that "Mr. Truman's statement means the matter. The subcommittee will consider Wednesday whether further steps it should take."

Fulbright indicated he had intended to stand on a special injunction the subcommittee issued Dawson on Feb. 2 to come in only at his convenience. He Dawson never acknowledged invitation.

Dawson's friends say he neither intended to resign nor was he

Will Take Crime Fight to People, Bearden Says

J. E. Bearden, former Hempstead sheriff, said today he would carry to the people his charge that gambling, bootlegging, and bookie joints are being operated openly in Hope and back it up with names, dates and places.

Bearden first made the charge in a letter to the editor which The Star published Wednesday, March 28.

The following day Prosecuting Attorney G. W. Lookadoo and his deputy, Royce Weisenberger, making a regular pre-court investigation of cases to be tried in April, subpoenaed Mr. Bearden for questioning.

Mr. Bearden reaffirmed his charges, naming local persons he said knew of the situation. Subpoenas were promptly issued for Tom Wardlaw, R. D. Franklin, Archie Chambliss, Calvin Douglas, George Meehan, and Brennis McPherson. All who were questioned denied any knowledge of bootlegging, horse-race betting, and gambling. No charges have been filed.

Mr. Bearden's statement follows: "They have asked for it. I think the only explanation necessary this time is that Mr. Lookadoo, Mr. Royce Weisenberger, his deputy, and Sheriff Claid Sutton were the grand jury referred to."

"I certainly didn't expect any indictments. I will carry my fight against crime to you, the people, in a public appearance and I will call names, dates, times and places, and let you, the people, be your own judge. I will not be made the goat. Respectfully, J. E. BEARDEN"

Will Answer in Time, Casey Says

Washington, March 31 — (AP) — Joseph E. Casey, who parlayed $100,000 into a $2,600,000 profit on war surplus ships, said today he and the friends who shared the proceeds will answer in their own time questions raised by investigation-minded senators.

Admiral William F. (Bull) Halsey, U. S. Diplomat Julius C. Holme and the late former Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., have been named by the maritime administration as being among his 17 associates in the deal. Casey refused to give their names to a senate banking subcommittee.

Senator Fulbright (D-Ark.), the subcommittee chairman, told reporters his group will decide Wednesday what steps to take about Casey's refusal.

Casey told a reporter he and a number of his associates will meet in New York City Monday. He did not say which ones will participate. He said they would discuss plans and probably agree on language of a statement designed to quiet the furor their ship venture has caused since it was disclosed in testimony before the Fulbright subcommittee March 12.

The subcommittee has charged no violations of law in purchase of the ships by Casey's American Overseas Tanker Corp., or in other phases of the complex, highly profitable deal. But it has raised question as to whether political influence was involved.

Two other senate committees moved to start senatorial investigations. Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D-Colo.), chairman of the senate commerce committee, told reporters he expects to order an inquiry into the story behind sale of the ships by the maritime commission, which has now become the maritime administration.

Senator McClellan (D-Ark.), head of the senate expenditures committee, which has wide power to investigate virtually all government affairs, said he is willing to launch a thorough inquiry, too.

Both Johnson and McClellan said their proposed inquiries would cover the whole scale of ship sales by the commission, and other matters.

Two Automobiles Demolished, None Seriously Hurt

Two cars were demolished and three persons narrowly escaped serious injury early today in separate accidents on Highway 67.

The tie-rods came loose on an auto driven by H. J. Altom, 23, of Hope and the vehicle crashed into a bridge about four miles east on 67. The vehicle turned over but the driver escaped with a wrist injury. The accident occurred about 12:30 a. m.

Three miles west on 67 a second vehicle driven by Harold Reeves of Little Rock left the road shoulder and overturned several times about 6 a. m. Reeves and a companion, Cecil West, also of Little Rock, escaped with minor bruises.

State Policeman Milton Mosier investigated.

12 Cited for Contempt by Committee

Washington, March 31 — (AP) — Senator Kefauver (D-Tenn.) said today he expects to propose a "method of continuing inquiry and study" of crime conditions exposed by his senate investigating subcommittee.

He did not elaborate. But he told a reporter flatly that he is opposed to a drive by two Republican members of the committee to extend the investigation until next Jan. 15.

While that issue remains to be fought out on the senate floor, the committee won unanimous senate backing for its contempt charges against such big-name gambling figures as Frank Costello, Frank Erickson and Joe Adonis.

The trio were among an even dozen balking witnesses cited by the senate yesterday for contempt of congress because of their refusal to answer some of the committee's questions.

Others on the list included Jacob (Greasy Thumb) Guzik, reputed treasurer of Chicago's Capone mob, and Morris Kleinman and Louis Rothkopf, former Cleveland bootleggers linked by the committee with interstate gambling operations.

Three others, William G. O'Brien and Ralph J. O'Hara, both of Chicago, and Stanley Cohen of San Francisco, were involved in the committee's investigation of race wire services.

Also cited for contempt were John Croft, linked by the committee with plush gambling places in northern Kentucky; George S. Bowers, a Miami gambling figure, and John Coyle of Gary, Ind., who was questioned about slot machines and other gambling operations there.

The contempt charges will be turned over to U. S. attorneys for presentation to grand juries in the cities where the witnesses were heard. Conviction carries maximum penalties of a year in jail and a $1,000 fine on each count.

Costello, a central figure in the committee's dramatic New York hearings, was named in a recent report of the group as a leader of one of the nation's two major crime syndicates. He denied it.

The contempt action against him was based on his refusal to disclose his net worth, a matter over which he wrangled while millions of television watchers viewed the proceedings.

Erickson, one of the nation's biggest bookmakers, was brought from a jail where he is serving two years on gambling charges to appear before the committee. He refused to talk.

Most of the witnesses cited for contempt based their refusal to reply to questions on the ground that they might incriminate themselves.

Alive or Dead, People All Over the World Laugh and Joke at George B. Shaw

By HAL BOYLE

New York — (AP) — People laughed at George Bernard Shaw when he was a living. They are chuckling at him again now that he is dead.

They think it quite a joke that the old Irish playwright should leave the residue of his millionaire estate to prove that the English language would be better off with a 40-letter alphabet than a 26-letter alphabet.

"Boy oh boy" says the average man. "I could sure think of something better than that to do with my money."

And he dismisses the whole project as just another intellectual prank on the part of Bernard Shaw, whose oddities included wearing a beard, vegetarianism — and living to be 94 years old.

It is perhaps Shaw's own fault, for as he said himself: "It is by jingling the bell of a jester's cap that I... have made people listen to me."

The trouble is that the people laughed at his bells but never heard the serious message beneath the bells. And there was usually a serious message. For Shaw wasn't merely a wry humorist and gifted dramatist.

Like all great moralists he hated waste. He hated waste in any form — waste of life, time, energy or money. He may have been wrong in some of his views, but they worked out well for him. He earned more than 50 plays, earned and saved more than a million dollars, and lived almost 90 years beyond the present average span of civilized man. Until shortly before his death at 94 he was still active, healthy, busy and cheerful.

For almost three quarters of a century he was a master in the use of the English language. He loved it dearly. With its words he built some wonderful edifices that will stand longer than Buckingham palace or the Tower of London.

But that language was a tool to him just as a wrench is to a mechanic. And just as a good mechanic sometimes can see ways to improve his tools so Shaw saw ways to improve the English language.

The thing he hated most about it was the fact it was wasteful. He wanted to simplify it. He wanted to get rid of the clutter and the redundancy. He wanted to make it more efficient.

Inside Peiping's Tatar City is the Imperial City and within that is the Forbidden City.

Citizens Group Endorses Waste Paper Drive

The citizens board of trustees which was named to supervise the funds collected under the tuition system of the Hope school district commended highly the interest shown by the Ramsay-Cargill VFW Post 451 of Hope in the worthy endeavor to keep local schools open for a full term for the current school year, J. L. Liebling, a member of the committee, said today.

The VFW is continuing to add this worthy cause by giving the proceeds of its war paper drive tomorrow (Sunday).

The citizens board of trustees heartily endorses this program and urges all citizens to place their waste paper in tied bundles on the curb in front of their homes by 1 p. m. Sunday, April 1, Mr. Liebling said.

The board thanks all who have given to this endeavor and urges anyone desiring to help to do so soon.

Educators Say Reds Know All the Angles

By VERN HAUGLAND

American educators who attended a Communist-dominated student conference in Czechoslovakia as observers say it showed American students ill equipped to meet trained Communists in rough and tumble debate.

A method frequently used by Communists to capture a labor union or other organization is to over-ride opposition at meetings through persistent persistence and deft use of parliamentary procedure.

The observers say the conference last August brought to light "some shortcomings in the preparation of American students" for their international responsibilities.

The congress was sponsored by the International Union of Students, from which the U. S. association withdrew in 1948 — because of the union's refusal to intervene on behalf of Prague students jailed or suspended in the Communist coup. Most other non-Communist groups later dropped out as the international union continued to help more closely to the foreign policy line of the Soviet Union.

Schwartz and West, writing in the semi-monthly publication of the U. S. office of education, say that the leadership at the Prague congress—even disregarding the Soviet and Eastern European delegates—was frankly Marxist.

"Such major nations as India and Italy, for example, were represented by student organizations formed of alliances between left-wing Socialist and Communist elements," they write. Red delegates from North Korea were applauded by "all of the Latin American, Asian, African and Middle Eastern groups, as well as the Soviet bloc."

Western delegations throughout the eight days of the meeting were submitted to "persistent attacks and a barrage of abuse, frequently in the form of shouting matches."

"Greater numbers American students must become familiar with the foreign languages in wide use today, with the important contemporary political issues and with the character of the several non-Western geographical areas of great political importance to Americans."

The writers say U. S. participation in the Prague conference also was limited because its delegation was much smaller than the Soviet delegation and was not equipped to compete with the cultural and sports teams and exhibitions brought from the East.

"This condition has been true of almost all U. S. participation in international gatherings among youth and students," they say. "The lesson here calls for much greater and more effective support of this phase of United States student extracurricular activities."

Slavs Report Fighting in Albania

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, March 31 — (AP) — Marshal Tito's official newspaper, Borba, reported today that armed groups of anti-Communist Albanians from Italy are being parachuted into their Soviet-dominated homeland and are fighting there.

An article in Borba by Tito's former information minister, Vladimir Dedjic, said that Albanian opponents of the present regime in Tirana, "by enjoying Italian hospitality," have been dropping leaflets denouncing the government from airplanes over Albania during the past month.

The article continued: "These planes were met by anti-aircraft guns and government police did not hesitate to shoot out of their guns until all leaflets were collected. Armed groups are being parachuted into Albania and they are fighting there."

Dedjic did not say what source of his information he was using, but he said that "what nationalities are what nationalities are."

Clay Quits Job to Enter Private Industry

Washington, March 31 — Gen. Lucius D. Clay, leaving his high mobilization job to enter private industry, predicted today that shortages will hit the civilian economy "hard and heavy" this year.

Makers of cars, refrigerators and other durables, whose supply will be cut 20 per cent starting tomorrow, probably will trim "another 10 per cent" more in the third or fourth quarter, Clay told a reporter.

The cutbacks have been caused so far, he said, partly because of defense leaders want to avoid widespread layoffs. Those would cut the labor force in industries which later will be needed for defense work.

Clay forecast a strong show-through the next three months passenger car producers, down the one-fifth reduction in production. The bulk of needed materials ready in hand, he explained.

Clay's decision to quit Washington was announced yesterday by one of the two special assistants to Charles E. Wilson, director of the office of defense mobilization. The other is Francis J. Weisenberger.

Clay will resume the board chairmanship of Continental Can Co., New York, from which he was leave in December. He received Wilson's thanks for a "valuable contribution" to defense.

His departure was expected since Wilson's problem of maintaining peace with organized labor, the leaders, who have pulled out of defense agencies in protest against mobilization policies, aimed much of their criticism at Clay.

There was no question of a branch between Wilson and Clay, however. The general, former military governor of Germany, was the Berlin blockade, ODM with the underground, and go home, when the job was well advanced.

Moreover, Clay said he had been working for Wilson since the call may come now. He indicated, when the press was shorting him to hurt.

Labor included Clay among "big business" figures who were running the mobilization. He held his largely responsible for the lodging of manpower in ODM in the Midwest.

They accused him of turning national service legislation into a tool to draft labor, forcing that war.

Drenching rains of the past days sent swollen rivers deep South over the flood stage. Heavy snows also hung over New York and New Jersey, East, and North Dakota, and in the Midwest.

Some 1,200 persons already been driven from their homes in Mississippi, with 50 deaths reported due to high waters. Scores of families were being bled from homes, with many reported missing.

At Childersburg, Ala., the river passed 30 feet above flood stage in mid-March, threatening the city under the guardmen, and R. C. Criss, a postmaster, a postmaster of lives. Simple flood stage is 20 feet.

Said National Flood Control Administrator George M. Limbaugh, "The people out of trees and homes and got them placed in sleep."

Childersburg's main supply failed, but commercial shippers gave promise of a supply holding steady.

Sunday School Lesson

By William E. Gilroy, D. D.

Suppose an intelligent person who had never read the stories of Genesis, should come across a reference to a "tree of the knowledge of good and evil," and an account of a serpent speaking, would he not in the very nature of the writing realize that the writer was speaking in a symbolic, rather than in a literal way?

One thing about the Bible that many people forget is that it is an Eastern book. The daily language and literature of the East has always been full of figures and symbols very different from much of our prosaic, Western liberalism.

The preps frequently used figures of speech and symbols very different from much of our prosaic, Western liberalism. The preps frequently used figures of speech and symbols very different from much of our prosaic, Western liberalism.

It was "a certain man," who went down into Jericho, and it might have been any man so far as the truth and the teachings were concerned. The parables are stories and teachings for today and not just stories of something that happened long ago. Their significance is not in historic incidents but as spiritual tales or parables with universality of application.

The great teacher under whom I studied these things years ago interpreted the symbolism of the early Genesis stories in his own way.

He suggested that the creation of woman from man's side meant that she was to be his equal and helper; not from his head that she should lord it over him, nor from his foot that he should dominate her. This interpretation is in harmony with the high esteem in which women were held among the Jews and in contrast with their inferior position among many of their peoples.

I have never forgotten an incident in the class room one day. When first most of the lecture period Chancellor Burwash had been proceeding with his poetic interpretation along this line, a student in the back of the room suddenly spoke up. "Do you think, Dr. Burwash," he said, "that Adam was put to sleep so he wouldn't feel any pain when the rib was taken away?"

I don't know whether the student had been asleep or not. But Dr. Burwash, a serious saint not often seen to smile, threw himself back in his chair, with a loud laugh. When he recovered himself he said in a solemn, singing tone, which I can hear to this day: "O, you bald Occidental, you do not understand the beautiful poetry of the Hebrew mind." The student, a diminutive fellow, was thereafter known as "the little rib"—but that's neither here nor there.

The story of the beginning of sin symbolizes the subtle and easy temptation of those made in the image and likeness of God: the divine essence of sin in disobedience to divine command; the knowledge of good and evil as the result of the fall and the emergence of man into moral struggle and moral responsibility.

Opponents of Franco Now More Open

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Lifting of the United Nations diplomatic ban on Franco Spain has had the effect of making the generalissimo's Spanish Republican opponents more vocal.

The Republican "government in exile" had been working so quietly that it had been largely lost sight of through the years since Franco waged his successful revolution. The exiled regime, however, appears to be decidedly alive as I have had impressed on me through meeting a very active member—General Jose Asensio, minister without portfolio, who is stationed in New York.

The general tells me the members of the Republican cabinet aren't all concentrated in one place, but strategically scattered—four in Paris and the rest in widely separated stations. He himself is not only a minister but also a permanent observer with the United Nations. Of this latter task he remarked to me rather plaintively but with diplomatic reserve:

"Unfortunately some disappointments have been experienced in connection with the case of Spain."

He was, of course, referring to the lifting of the U. N. diplomatic boycott against Franco. The first time I met the general (who has been a reader of this column) he said:

"You believe Franco should be brought into the North Atlantic defensive pact, don't you?"

I replied in the affirmative, on the ground that this would greatly strengthen the alliance. I added, however, that I do not approve of any dictatorships, as I have made clear innumerable times in my articles. The general grinned and we dropped the subject.

General Asensio is not only a university graduate but was trained in the Spanish Preparatory Naval college at Ferrol and the naval academy at Toledo the same time Franco attended. Asensio saw varied military service and rose rapidly until he became a member of the general staff. His service included numerous diplomatic assignments.

When Franco launched his rebellion in 1936, General Asensio took the field against him until made under secretary of the ministry of war. Finally in January of '39 he was appointed military attaché at the Spanish embassy in Washington, a post he held until Madrid surrendered two months later. Since then he has been a political refugee, representing the republic in America.

It seems passing strange that "government in exile" should hang on so long and so doggedly, until you remember that ideologies die hard.

General Asensio tells me that President of the Republic Diego Martinez Barrio has headquarters in Paris. With him are Fernando Valera, vice-president of the government and minister of finance; Jose Maldonado, minister of justice; and Eugenio Arauz, minister without portfolio and secretary of the government.

Alvaro de Albornoz, president of the government, prime minister and minister of foreign affairs, is in Mexico City. Jose Maria Sampedro, minister without portfolio, is in Mexico City. Jose Maria Sampedro, minister without portfolio, is in Mexico City.

I asked General Asensio to define the precise function of the exiled government, and here are some of the points he made:

"Our task is to preserve legal continuity with the last government constitutionally elected on Spanish soil. Our government in exile is open to all Spanish democratic forces on the sole conditions that the Republican institutions shall be preserved as these are the last expressions of the national will, and that the opportunity be given the Spanish people of choosing freely the system under which they wish to live and thus enjoy full privileges of universal suffrage."

"It is difficult to overthrow Fascist governments by action inside the countries. The Germans could not liberate themselves from Hitler nor the Italians from Mussolini. The same thing has proved true with all the occupied countries in Europe. Spain in a militarily conquered and occupied country, therefore the fall of Franco must be the result of the combined action of all the Spaniards inside and outside Spain, with the moral assistance of the United Nations."

"It is our earnest desire and ultimate purpose to maintain the people in the spirit of the Christian civilization and to do the utmost to avoid a violent and terrible struggle with consequent bloodshed."

Staying Attractive

You are young now. And pretty. And popular. What will you be when you are 40? When you are 50? When you are 60? When you are 70? Will you still be charming? Will people seek your society, or avoid you as they would the plague?

When the average woman faces these questions she begins counting her calories and grabs her hat and rubes to the nearest beauty parlor and childlike faith in the power of diet and cosmetics to preserve their attractions and keep them persona grata to their fellow creatures. Alas and alack, how ever, a lipstick is a broken reed on which to lean in one's journey down the years; there comes a time when the rouge pot fails, and not all the facials in the world will wipe out the lines that living has made. Then indeed a woman is lost who has not provided against age and acquired other charms to take the place of those which Time has robbed her.

When we are young we are even as God made us but when we are middle-aged and elderly we are what we have made ourselves. Almost all young girls are attractive but it takes a lot of work and intelligence and being perpetually on the job for a woman to keep herself charming. That is a stark fact that too many women ignore. The line of fascinations that made her a belle at 20 make her a bore at 40. She has to be continually adding to her stock of attractions and changing her merchandise if she wants to keep her public.

We've All Seen It Happen

All of us have had illuminating experiences along these lines. We have met, after a lapse of many years, some friend of school days who has always stood out in our memories as an adorable ideal. She was so beautiful, so gay, so vivacious, the life of every party. She took the prizes at school. She was the best dancer. She was voted the most popular girl. She was tops in everything.

But when we saw her in later life, what a shock! What a change! Her beauty was gone. Her slenderness lost in fat. Her gay laugh silenced. All that had made her so attractive as a girl wiped out as if it had never been, and in its stead a stolid, commonplace, dull and peevish woman who had lost the charms of youth and had not replaced them with the greater charms of maturity.

And who has not seen the opposite of this happen, and a girl who was an ugly duckling in her youth turn into a swan in later life? I often think of a girl I knew who was big, overgrown, and clumsy, with no beauty to boast of and so self-conscious and timid it made her seem dull. At school she was always passed over. The boys never dated her and even her own family were half-ashamed of her and kept her in the background.

But by the time she was middle-aged, Cinderella had come out of the kitchen and into the drawing room where she reigned like a queen. She who had been homely as a young girl was beautiful with her crown of snow-white hair. She had acquired poise and dignity and learned how to dress. She had read and studied until she was the most interesting of companions and had literally made herself into the kind of woman she wanted to be.

Start Working on It

So we can all to a great extent, and it is worthwhile when we are sweet-and-30 to begin considering what we want to be at hard-and-50 and start to do something about it. We cannot stop the clock nor yet it back. We can work our miracle that can keep us young and beautiful, but we can keep ourselves easy on the eyes by refusing to become mountains of fat or bags of bones and by wearing pretty clothes and learning how to do our hair.

Each woman of us decides for herself whether she will be peevish and fretful, or a good sport when she is old. She decides whether she will be one of the fascinating conversationalists that every man hopes to draw as a dinner partner, or a tiresome bore whose only topic is her major operation. She decides whether she will be the only woman to her husband, or whether he will be seeking the Other Woman. And she decides whether her children will look upon Mother as a combined angel and oracle, or as a pest. Which do you want to be?

The Legend of the 'Rock' Still Alive

The football world was stunned by the news that Notre Dame's famed coach, bald-domed man of electrifying personality and stalling psychology: Met a tragic end in the midst of a brilliant career.

It could be expected the Rock's feat of guiding 13 Irish elements to five undefeated, untied seasons and 103 victories against only 12 losses and five ties would wear well against the faded-drumming parade of years.

But 20 years have passed, a generation of football players not yet born when Rockne thrived has churned the turf on his beloved Irish campus, and still the memory of the man has a burning hold on the grid realm.

His name has been projected high in the voting in the Associated Press's all-time All-American poll the coach selection of which will be disclosed April 11.

Tomorrow, Notre Dame alumni throughout the nation will commemorate Rockne's passing by attending mass and communion breakfasts. On the campus here, 150 past and present students and friends will do the same and also visit the nearby cemetery for the traditional placing of a wreath on Rockne's grave.

At the Rockne memorial breakfast here, Fred Steers of Chicago former Notre Dame track star and one-time schoolmate of Rockne at Chicago's old northwest division high school, will be principal speaker.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

New York, March 31 —(AP)—There probably is nothing Bill Veeck could like more than to have another big league baseball team to promote, preferably in New York. Perched on an office desk, Bill took a quick tour from the "iron curtain" to Hawaii, with various detours, but he wound up verbally as well as physically in the big town. "We (meaning himself and Abe Saperstein) were in Hawaii looking over some Japanese ball players," Bill began, after a quick jump from the Russia embassy in Washington where he had discussed a projected visit inside the iron curtain by Abe's Harlem Globetrotters. "Three of them (the Japanese, of course) looked pretty good. One pitcher can really throw hard and there's a big fellow — over six feet and about 215 pounds who can belt that ball. They're under contract in Japan, but I think maybe we can get them. That's the last untapped reserve of talent and I'd like to have a few good players stashed away in case I ever get into operation again.

Smart Operator
Veeck's listeners picked up their ears because "operation" in Bill means big league stuff. . . . It developed that he was talking about his Oklahoma City club, with an eye to the future. "We already have three boys from Mexico," he continued. "You see if you get half of club you can't buy a team."

"I'm not like Briggs or Yawkey, have to make money. So I have a half dozen good boys stashed away and I bring them out and I'm a smart guy. That's why we went independent this year. If you have a working agreement and a good player, you can't keep him."

A question focussed mention at the hour 7 of a club which drew 1,600,000 customers in his best season from a population of only 200,000 in that park area. Just rope off that deep center field. Who's going to hit out there, anyway? . . . They say television hurt; I don't think so. . . . Our figures at Cleveland showed the average fan on goes to the ballpark three times a year. Maybe he'll watch the other games on television, but he'll go to those three."

Pennant Picker
Mention of Cleveland brought up the Indians' pennant prospects and Veeck, whose headquarters are near their Tucson, Ariz., training base, picked the Tribe to win in a breeze. "I say that with two reserva-

Furgol, Bolt Front Runners

Wilmington, N. C., March 31 —(AP)—Marty Furgol and Tommy Bolt were the front runners as the $10,000 Azalea Open golf tournament headed into its third round today. But 18 rivals, all under par, were from two to four strokes away, ready to take charge if the co-leaders showed signs of faltering.

Bolt, a Texan who registers from Durham, N. C., caught first-day leader Furgol with a second 70 to go along with his opening day 69 for 130 to start today's play.

Furgol, Long Beach Calif. pro, and the first day big man at 67, slumped a bit to par 72 yesterday, but was able to match Bolt's total.

Six men were two shots away at 141, two more were at 142 and 10 others had 143, only four strokes back of the pace setters.

Will you dance is the only filly named for the race. Kentucky derby eligibles are Rubie, Bulverde, Stop Gap, King's Hope, Irish Flare and Ruby's Jon.

Neither this year's leading Oaklawn jockey nor 1950's top rider was scheduled to ride in the derby. L. Cook, who was the leader here two years ago and is top jockey again this year, was to ride in three other races today. Johnny Brooks, last year's leader, had only one mount.

Owens Cuts, owned by Mrs. Mattie Toffel, led eight others most of the way to win the featured mile and a sixteenth "Forth and

Annual Derby to Climax Spa Season

Hot Springs, March 31 —(AP)—The $10,000 Azalea Open Derby today closes the 30-day horse racing season at Oaklawn Park here.

Thirteen three-year-old speedsters, including six Kentucky Day eligibles, have been named for the classic. It is the largest field in the history of the event.

Only entry in the race Mrs. Emil Denmark's Rubie and King Diver, Rubie is highly regarded as a result of his impressive win in the mile and a sixteenth Park Hotel purse here last Monday. The derby also is for a mile and a sixteenth.

Mrs. Fred Sharpe's King's Hope will carry top weight of 126 pounds. Winner of five stakes as a two-year-old, King's Hope probably will rival Rubie for the public's favor.
